NEBRASKA SPELLS "SPORTSMANSHIP"

The University of Nebraska is known and respected all over the nation for its red-attired fans, as well as its football teams.

Nebraska fans also have a nationwide reputation for good sportsmanship, at home and away.

"Big League"—that's the way Nebraska teams and fans have acquitted themselves in past seasons, and that's the same goal for 1979.

The University of Nebraska urges all 1979 fans to continue this fine tradition of sportsmanship by extending courtesy to the visiting teams and officials.

All of us on the Cornhusker Staff salute our fans as the greatest in the nation and thank you for your support and sportsmanship.

Yours for Nebraska,

NU vs. NMSU=102nd consecutive sellout at Memorial Stadium

NU Hosts Missouri Valley Foe New Mexico State Today

Tom Osborne's Nebraska Cornhuskers hope to make it four wins in a row today as the Huskers host Gil Krueger's Aggies from New Mexico State University, the defending Missouri Valley Conference champions.

Nebraska is currently 3-0, with wins over Utah State (35-14), Iowa (24-21) and last Saturday's 42-17 win over Penn State in Lincoln. This week, the Huskers are ranked No. 5 in the country.

New Mexico State is 2-3, beating Wichita State (23-13) and Texas-El Paso (14-13), but losing to Drake (14-13) and New Mexico 30-16 last Saturday night at Las Cruces.

The Huskers are coming off one of their biggest wins in the school's history. Not only was the Nebraska triumph over Penn State viewed by 76,151 fans in Memorial Stadium, but it was also televised to almost three-fourths of the country by ABC-TV.

Against Penn State, the ABC-TV Offensive Player of the Game was Husker senior quarterback Tim Hager. In his first start ever—and also the first Lincoln quarterback in 24 years to pilot the Huskers—Hager completed 14 of 22 passes for 215 yards and two touchdowns, both second quarter tosses to senior tight end Junior Miller of 11 and 70 yards.

Nebraska's Defensive Player of the Game against the Nittany Lions was junior linebacker Brent Williams, who had 13 total tackles, including seven unassisted and one stop behind the line for a four-yard loss. Williams was Nebraska's defensive candidate for his efforts against Utah State.

New Mexico State is having a tough year battling what every college football coach fears—injuries. Even though the season is still not half over, the Aggies have already lost seven starters—three on offense and four on defense—because of injuries.

Against New Mexico Saturday night, the Aggies were paced by junior tailback Anton Niles, who tallied two touchdowns on runs of three and one yard.

Osborne continues to prove himself as one of the most successful college coaches in the country. Now in his seventh season at the Husker helm, he is 58-16-2, while leading the Huskers to a Top 10 national finish and a bowl in each of his Husker head years.

Krueger, now in his second season at NMSU, is 8-8 with the Aggies and 90-49-2 in his 14-year college coaching career.

Today's matchup between the Huskers and Aggies is the first meeting between the two schools. New Mexico State returns to Lincoln in 1982.

Husker fans everywhere salute Krueger and his staff, along with the Aggie players and their fans as another football Saturday afternoon in Lincoln is about to begin.

SPORT YOUR COLORS IN NEBRASKA FANS VANS!

Imagine pulling into a Cornhuskers home game behind the wheel of your University of Nebraska FANS VAN. It's a crimson van with white rocker panels and side stripes, plus lettering in the rocker panels reading "Cornhuskers". It is also available in white with bright red rocker panels and side stripes. A custom-designed spare tire cover on the back completes the FANS VANS package.

Inside, the most sophisticated, luxurious interior you'll ever see in a custom van. Plush velour upholstery. Teak wood trim and solid teak pedestal table. Fabric ceiling and wall liners. Plush shag carpeting.

The Nebraska FANS VANS sport our rich, carmine interior. Earthy Buckskin or silver with burgundy trim interiors are also available. Or you can order your Nebraska FANS VAN with real leather interior, at extra cost.

And to complete the FANS VANS treatment, the official seal of the University of Nebraska has been engraved in a copper medallion and inset into the teak table.

What a way to sport your colors! What a way to show your school spirit! And what a great way to enjoy weekend home games, tailgate parties and Cornhusker victory celebrations.

ALSO AVAILABLE: FANS VANS models for all Big Eight Conference schools, all Southwest Conference schools, all Big Ten schools plus many more.

See your local Chevrolet or G.M.C. Truck Dealer for details.

College of Home Economics

By Maureen Hutfless

Office of University Information

Choose the University of Nebraska college that has the most effect on your everyday life. Business Administration? Engineering and Technology? Perhaps. But the College of Home Economics would deserve careful consideration for the choice.

The College is immersed in every facet of home and family life, and faculty members seem to be hatching new ideas constantly on how to improve life for the average citizen.

Many current projects demonstrate the breadth of the College's concerns. Its Second Annual National Symposium on Building Family Strengths last May drew to Lincoln 800 people from 27 countries. The Symposium, sponsored by the College's Department of Human Development and the Family in cooperation with the UNL Division of Continuing Studies, featured more than 60 workshops and presentations by professionals in 29 states. It won the 1979 Creative Programming Award of the Conferences and Institutes Division, National University Extension Association. The first Symposium the previous year resulted in a book of recommendations on how society can support families. A Third National Symposium is scheduled for May, 1980.

Another program which has brought the College wide recognition is its independent living program. The program helps many of the state's 180,000 physically disabled, mentally retarded, or mentally ill persons learn to function independently. Students come from all over the U.S. to absorb techniques for helping the handicapped learn to care for themselves, their families, and their homes. The program has served as a model for others around the country, and last spring a national workshop was held to demonstrate how it was set up. Some findings resulting from the program had impact on federal legislation, according to Home Economics Dean Hazel Anthony.

The College's assistance to the handicapped extends to babies as well as adults. The Infant Development Encouragement Program provides special education services for developmentally delayed children up to three years old. Its goal is to train parents to provide developmental stimulation for the child. To this end, the youngster is given medical, psychological, and physical and occupational therapy evaluations which are used in formulating an individualized education plan.

Children are also the subject of a College study on how parents discipline their offspring, to be used by counselors and educators in developing programs to teach "parenting" skills.

Home economists, keeping current with the times, incorporate new technologies into their plans for improving the quality of life. For example, they assisted in developing four computer programs, available through county extension offices, which help residents of Nebraska and six other states with financial planning. The programs allow clients to compare their spending with that of others in similar circumstances, calculate their cash flow pattern for the coming year, budget for retirement, and determine how a major purchase will affect their financial situation for the next five years.

Another program available through the county extension office helps homeowners determine how home energy costs can be reduced. Information on a particular dwelling is fed into a computer which figures what savings would result from modifications such as increased insulation or weatherstripping.

A different perspective on houses is taken in a current College research project. Rural and urban Nebraska historic housing is being studied to better understand the lifestyles and values of past families and the contributions of ethnic groups to Nebraska culture.

Computer programs which Home Economics faculty members helped to develop are available through County Extension Offices to help individuals budget their incomes and plan ways of reducing home energy needs.

Lifestyles of contemporary Nebraskans are affected in subtle ways by the home economists' work. For example, flame resistance of fabrics used in work clothes worn by farmers, service workers, and other outdoor laborers is presently being tested through use of the College's "weather-ometer," a large machine which simulates environmental conditions including sunlight, humidity, and air pollution.

The College faculty is bubbling over with ideas for helping not only the general public, but also the college's students. A new graduate-level course allows class members to interview via telephone hookup eminent American marriage and family counselors and educators such as Dr. Benjamin Spock. The students talk for an hour with each expert after reading his works.

To accommodate the rapid growth of the fast food industry and interest in gourmet and ethnic foods, a new home economics option was begun this fall on the Omaha campus. The Restaurant Institution Management Program will help budding restaurateurs prepare for their careers with practicums in Omaha restaurants as well as courses in accounting, personnel management, catering, selling, business law, French or Spanish, and foods and food service management.

The UNO and UNL programs merged five years ago into one University of Nebraska College of Home Economics, but each has separate faculty and students. There is no duplication in programs between the two campuses, and courses taken on one

100 / Marching into its Years Second Century

By Connie Gulick
Editorial Assistant
Office of University Information

Which came first, football or the UNL Marching Band?

"The Band," says UNL Band Alumni Association Historian Gary Steffens.

"Unknown to many, the Cornhusker Marching Band played a prominent role in bringing football to the UNL campus in 1890," Steffens said. "When former drum major Roscoe Pound left the band to attend Harvard Law School, he discovered the game and brought it back with him, peddling it somewhat like a soapbox orator and using the band as a spirit rouser."

Dispensing facts like these (which are being published in a pictorial history of the band written by Steffens) is just one of the ways in which the Cornhusker Marching Band is celebrating its 100th birthday this year, according to UNL Director of Bands Jack R. Snider.

Many other events are planned throughout the 1979-80 academic year, including the annual Band Alumni Reunion being held this weekend, highlighted by today's half-time show.

The UNL School of Music may also revive statewide band tours during the second semester as part of the Centennial celebration, according to Snider.

"We hope to send two of our concert bands on tour in the state," Snider said. "The Symphonic Wind Ensemble is making plans to travel to Ainsworth, Alliance, Chadron, Scottsbluff, Kimball, North Platte and Kearney. Our larger Symphonic Band is planning performances in Omaha, Papillion, Plattsmouth, Nebraska City, Auburn and Beatrice.

According to Steffens, the band was originally formed as an R.O.T.C. unit. The band made its first long distance tour in 1901 for one of the early Nebraska-Minnesota games at Minneapolis. "It's believed to be one of the first such band trips of its kind in the nation," he said. "A memorable journey was also made to Oregon in 1916 for the Nebraska-Oregon State game. Those types of trips were continued during the roaring 20's with jaunts to South Bend, Ind., in 1924, Seattle, Washington in 1926, and West Point, N.Y. in 1928.

"The Cornhusker Band also made an unforgettable trip to the Rose Bowl in 1941," Steffens said, "where a tremendous halftime performance gave the Band almost more publicity than the team."

Trips to Bowl games became more commonplace in the 1960's and 70's and the band toured Europe in 1974.

Steffens said the high musical caliber of the band has been its greatest asset. "In 1927, John Philip Sousa presented it with a handsome silver loving cup and proclaimed it one of the finest college bands in the U.S. In 1955, march composer Henry Fillmore called it 'the greatest sounding college band' he had ever heard. In Europe, many listeners thought it was a professional band.

"That type of reputation doesn't develop overnight. It's built up over many years by hard work from both members and leaders," Steffens said.

The band's first director was August Hagenow, (1903-12), who studied at the Leipzig Conservatory in Germany. He was followed by William T. "Billy" Quick, (1917-37), who was the musical director at the old Oliver Theatre at 13th and P Sts. in Lincoln before coming to the University.

The third director was Don Lentz, who studied at the Juilliard School of Music. He played in the New York Philharmonic and John Philip Sousa's band before coming to Lincoln. Lentz is widely recognized as the father of University Band Day.

Lentz directed the Marching Band from 1937 until 1961, when he turned over the reins to his assistant, Jack R. Snider, while continuing through 1973 as UNL's director of bands. Snider, himself a former Marching Band member, was appointed Lentz's successor as director of bands in 1973 but directed the Marching Band through the 1974 season.

In 1975, Dr. Robert A. Fought, who joined the UNL faculty in 1974, became director of the Marching Band.

Marching Band Centennial Events

- Oct. 5 Centennial Banquet
- Oct. 6 Band Alumni Half-Time Show
- Oct. 20 Invitational Band Competition, Parade featuring more than 40 high school bands.
- Oct. 27 Band Competition winner performs with Marching Band at half-time of Colorado game.
- Nov. 30 Marching Band Indoor Centennial Concert, Kimball Recital Hall.
- Dec. 2 Symphonic Wind Ensemble and Concert Band Concert, Kimball Recital Hall.

Fought, the current director, came to UNL from Syracuse University where he was director of bands and chairman of the wind department in the university's school of music. He holds bachelor's and doctoral degrees in music education from Pennsylvania State University, and a master of music degree from Northwestern University.

For a complete history of the UNL Marching Band, followers of Nebraska football are urged to read Steffen's "Pride of the Cornhuskers," a thoroughly researched, 300-page history of the band's evolution from 1879 to the present. Steffens said some of the pictures appearing in the book are printed from color films of some of the half-time shows of the 30's, which were "made through the foresight of Director Lentz, who paid for them out of his own pocket."

In addition to the book, a three-record collection of performances by the Wind Ensemble, the Symphonic Band, the Collegiate Band, and the Marching Band will be available. The collection will feature selections from the earliest tapes and records which can be found, continuing to the present.

Director of Bands Snider said "the finest of all serious band literature will be included, along with a variety of marches and of course, school songs."

Persons interested in the memorabilia should contact the University Band Office.

These are some of the New York Life Agents
in this community.
They're good people to know.

Join up with the winning team.

Ever since New York Life wrote its very first insurance policy more than 133 years ago, we've acted on the principle that excellence of service is the surest way to secure people's confidence and trust.

We've placed special emphasis, too, on the careful selection of men and women of integrity and ability to serve as New York Life Agents.

Maybe that's why millions of people depend on us today to help provide financial security for their families and their businesses.

For your financial security, join up with the winning team.

Managing money.

It's too important to make a game of it.

With some people, it's hit or miss.

Even for the vast majority of us who take our financial obligations seriously, balancing a budget isn't easy. Just when you think you've found the answer, inflation takes another bite out of your paycheck. And everything starts costing more. Putting the kids through school. Food. Clothes. A better home. Or even new appliances. Sometimes it makes you wonder if you ever can get ahead. No matter how hard you try.

Take an opportunity, not a chance.

Fortunately, there is someone you can turn to for help. Your Credit Union. Our business is helping people get more out of their money. We can help you save. Help you borrow. And, if you like, we can even show you how to avoid future money problems by suggesting practical strategies that really work.

We play it straight.

Too many organizations try to use personal financial counseling as a way to sell other services. A consolidation loan. A fee. A gimmicky savings account. Your credit union doesn't operate that way. Our financial counseling is free to each member. No strings attached.

We'll keep it confidential too.

Your business is nobody else's business. We don't gossip. Or send your name to anybody. Or turn you over to somebody who charges you for their help. We believe in being private. Practical, professional counseling. It's free for the asking at your credit union.

Discover your credit union.

We're doing more for you.

For information, please write your state's credit union league or CUNA, P O Box 431, Madison, WI, 53701.

JUBIL-AIRE NEBRASKA AIR HORNS

$74.95

This sturdy horn is chrome plated and made of high impact polypropylene. The compact, self-contained electrically operated system works off car battery and automatically plays the first few bars of the Fight Song at the touch of a single button. Installation can be made by any mechanic or do-it-yourself. For 12 volt systems. This in no way interferes with your regular car horn. Complete set, ready to install, includes trumpets, compressor, tubing, horn button (or switch), mounting brackets and instructions.

THE DRAW KEEPS THE DEFENSE HONEST

by Bill Lyon, Philadelphia INQUIRER

There's only one thing wrong with the title of this article," the coach was saying. "You didn't finish it."

The title, of course, is "The Draw Keeps the Defense Honest." The coach wanted an amendment to it. This: "... But Only If You Throw."

What he was contending—and his point was supported by five other successful college football coaches around the country—is that the draw is effective only if you are in a passing situation, or if you have a reputation as a passing team. Otherwise, calling the draw is like Jimmy Carter ordering extra teeth, or one of those Mideastern oil sheikdoms stocking up on economy cars.

"When you're playing a team that is primarily a running team, the draw is the first thing you look for on third-and-long," the coach explained. "The draw is like any other play in that it works only at the right time, at the right place, and against the right defense. That last part is the most important. The draw works best when it's a definite passing down, but again, only if you're a team that throws. It's most effective fective in an obvious passing situation.

"The defense has to believe you're going to pass. Which means you have to encourage them. It's the old step-into-my-parlor routine with the spider and the fly. You lure 'em in and then you spring the trap."

A team that works the draw best is one recruited from drama class. Theatrics are needed by all 11 players on offense.

"Better believe it," the coach agreed. "You have to do a great selling job. You have to convince the defense you're going to throw 'cause you want them with their ears back, rearing on their hind legs and really coming at you."

"The whole philosophy behind the draw is to spread out the defense, create gaps, widen lanes. What you're trying to achieve is a one-on-one situation. And if you have the best athletes, then your one-on-one is gonna win."

So it all begins with the classic con—I'll make you believe I'm going to do something when, in fact, I intend to do just the opposite. In the case of the draw, show pass even though you're going to run.

"It starts with your offensive line," the coach said. "Your blockers set up like it's a pass. They retreat, a step at a time."

"They have to steer the rushers whatever way they want to go, make 'em believe they're overpowering the blockers. You keep suckering them in. And your receivers, they've got to run their patterns with convictions, make that secondary go after them, make them worried about getting burned by a pass."

"And your quarterback, he's really got to fake it. He's the one who makes the draw go because the defense is always taught that the longer the QB has the ball then the deeper the linebackers and the defensive backs should drop. That's what I meant by spreading out the defense."

Even the most casual fan knows the draw, of course. The quarterback, if he is convincing, backpedals furiously, tries to work up a look of terror and panic as though he is about to be sacked. And then, at the proper moment, he slips the ball into the waiting back's belly. The momentum of the defense's pass rush has, by now, carried it beyond the point of that exchange.

"If things have gone right," the coach said, "you've split the front group, and you've got the others 30 or 40 yards downfield. If your man picks up a block, he can go all the way."

But there is another key to the draw. Patience.

"Right," the coach said. "Patience in executing it. Most teams run the draw too fast, and they don't finish it off. The

by Jim Weeks, Norman TRANSCRIPT

Bart Conner sailed from the pommel horse, threw his arms in the air, forming a V, and flashed the impish smile that signals the other gymnastics competitors face a real challenge.

"That would win anywhere in the world," said Paul Ziert, coach at the University of Oklahoma, when he greeted Conner after one of his performances in a collegiate dual meet last season.

Two months later, Ziert's evaluation was proven uncannily accurate. Conner won the pommel horse event in the World Cup in Japan against the world's best gymnasts. In doing so, he became only the second American man to win a gold medal at such a high level of international gymnastics competition.

Conner will be only one of the leading athletes from the Big Eight Conference to try for berths on United States teams for the 1980 Olympic Games.

The Big Eight is best known nationally for its football powers. But, of course, football is not a sport in the Olympics.

Debbie Esser
Iowa State

However, athletes from the Big Eight are expected to be among the leaders in seeking berths on U.S. teams in basketball, track and field, wrestling and skiing as well as gymnastics.

Conner will have competition from his own school, the University of Nebraska and Iowa State University in seeking one of the seven spots on the U.S. team in trials next year.

But Conner is the only gymnast in that group who was on the 1976 U.S. team for the Olympics. The native of Morton Grove, Ill., made the team after being graduated from Niles West High in Skokie, Ill.

Since then, Conner has led Oklahoma to the NCAA team championship in 1978 and a tie for that title in 1977. He was NCAA individual champion in the all-around in 1978 and tied for the floor exercise title with teammate Mike Wilson this year. Conner also claimed the all-around title in the U.S. Federation meet this year.

Wilson, who was graduated this year after finishing fourth in the all-around in the 1979 NCAA Championships, also will be a leading contender for the U.S. team.

Nebraska, 1979 NCAA team champion, will have strong candidates in sophomore Jim Hartung, freshman Phil Cahoy and graduated Larry Gerard.

Hartung made his mark last season, upsetting Conner early in the season but finishing behind his more experienced foe in the Big Eight and NCAA championships. Conner won the conference all-around title, and Hartung

ABOUT THE AUTHOR—Bill Lyon has been a sport columnist for The Philadelphia Inquirer since 1973, covering football on a regular basis and reporting on such other major events as the Super Bowl, World Series, Masters, U.S. Open, Stanley Cup playoffs, heavyweight fights and even the Evel Knievel Snake River Canyon jump. His columns appear in over 35 papers, including the Miami Herald, Boston Globe, Chicago Tribune, and Detroit Free Press.

back who's carrying the ball has to delay, even after he's taken the handoff. Otherwise, the defense has a chance to recover. That's why we run what we call a 'back door draw.' The quarterback actually passes by the back, then hands the ball forward. That'll make the back delay. He has to stay put. I'd say that's the biggest problem with the way most teams run the draw. The back gets itchy feet. He sees a hole developing and he can't wait to get to it. If he'd just be patient, that hole will get wider and wider.

"And the quarterback has to finish it off. After he's handed off, he's got to go on retreating and set up like he's going to throw. That'll keep the pass rushers coming, and they'll run themselves right out of the play. After all, that's why they call it the draw; the idea is to d-r-a-w everyone in. The quarterback is the cheese. If he's convincing, then you can snap the trap right on their neck."

This particular coach believes that the draw actually should be considered a passing play. Others share that belief.

"Any yardage you make on the draw," said another coach, "should be added to your passing yardage. Just like screens and flares. And a quarterback sack, that yardage loss should come off the passing total, not the running."

It may seem a minor statistical point but it underscores the importance of the draw as a complement to the passing game.

One misconception is that the draw is effective against a blitz. In fact, it works best in situations when most teams ordinarily throw. Example: with time running out and your team behind.

"Most teams go for the bomb or try to work the sidelines with passes," notes another coach whose team routinely throws 30 to 35 times a game. "But in that situation, against a prevent defense, the draw is perfect. First off, you've already got the defense spread out. They've done half the job for you. They're laying back, and they're really vulnerable to the draw because they, and everybody in the stadium, is expecting you to put it up for grabs. We've run the draw in catch-up situations and scored 70-yard touchdowns off it."

There are, obviously, refinements off the original.

There are sprint and roll draws and quarterback draws and quick draws. But they are hybrids and remain primarily running plays.

"But the regular draw," another coach said, "is a play all by itself. It's calculated, it's a big play move, a home run kind of offense. One guy misses a tackle and the draw can take you all the way. And sometimes we'll use it just for a change of pace. Let's say we're not completing any passes and we're not getting anything by running, we'll call the draw just for variety, just to disrupt the other guy's tempo."

Two variations of the draw: Top: The quarterback fades back faking a pass play and abruptly hands off to the strong side back who is cutting over the weak side of the line. Bottom: The quarterback drops back quickly for a short distance faking a deep drop-back, then cuts back over center, reading the defensive center for direction.

Teams which use the draw have learned they need options off it. So they run a reverse off the draw. Or they pass off the draw. It seems logical. If you're going to depend heavily on one play, you need variations off it. After all, everyone knows how modern and complicated the game has become. Why, the draw itself is a new-fangled invention, isn't it?

"I have a book in my office," a coach said, "written by Amos Alonzo Stagg, and it's got a draw play diagrammed in it. You know when the book was published? In 1893."

It was 1923, and Tad Jones, the fabled coach, stood before his men in the locker room. "Gentlemen," he said, "you are about to play football for Yale against Harvard. Never in your lives will you ever do anything so important."

That's the essence of the big game. We chuckle at Jones' emphasis—but in more reflective moments we realize that for most young men his words are startlingly prophetic. His statement is the core of the big game, and you can substitute any of scores of names for Yale and Harvard.

Great games may be traditional matches, games that always are sold out a year ahead of time. Or circumstances may heat white a game between teams that aren't old rivals. A memorable example of the latter occurred in 1921.

Centre College of Danville, Ky., a school with a student body of 295, wrangled a couple of dates with mighty Harvard. The Praying Colonels were awed by Harvard's big stadium and were smashed 34-13 in 1920.

But Centre's triple threat, Bo McMillin, snarled: "We'll be back here next year to take you."

It happened. Centre returned, and McMillin scored the game's only touchdown, weaving through the Harvard team for 35 yards. So caught up in the scene were Crimson fans that they carried McMillin off the field.

Big games spawn memorable stories, and one of football's most famous involves the dying George Gipp.

posed to have said to his coach, Knute Rockne.

Years later, in 1928, a great Army team was leading the Irish at halftime—and there was no bigger game at the time than Notre Dame-Army. Rockne secured his place in college football legend with a stirring halftime talk asking his troops to win that one for the Gipper.

Late in the game, Jack Chevigny crossed the goal line for the winning touchdown in a 12-6 upset, crying: "This one's for the Gipper!"

Memories of a historic game—one that his team lost—helped Gerald Ford years later in another rugged field, that of politics.

Ford played linebacker and center on the 1934 Michigan team that won just one game. In fact, he was voted its most valuable player.

The Wolverines were facing Minnesota, the eventual national champion, and the battle cry in Minneapolis, the game site, was "Mangle Michigan." A record crowd of 60,000 turned out to see it happen.

Minnesota wore down Michigan with raw power in the second half and won 34-0, but that afternoon remained special to Ford, even after he became President.

"During 25 years in the rough-and-tumble world of politics, I often thought of the experiences before, during and after that game in 1934," Ford said. "Remembering them has helped me many times to face a tough situation, take action, and make every effort possible despite adverse odds. I remember how Michigan students and people in Ann Arbor met us at the train station that Sunday. There was a rousing parade, and this was a meaningful tribute to the fight the Wolverines had put up against Minnesota."

A man who would become President figured in another historic game, though in quite a different way.

Stanford-California is one of football's tradition-laden matches. California had been playing for years, but Stanford fielded its first football team in 1892. A match between the two Bay Area schools was a natural.

It was such a natural, in fact, that a crowd estimated at 20,000 showed up, though tickets had been printed for only 10,000.

Little paper money was in circulation in those days, and the mountain of change caused a crisis. Herbert Hoover, student manager of the Stanford team, quickly rounded up wash boilers and dish pans to hold the gold and silver spectators paid for their tickets.

Incidentally, there was another problem in the initiation of this great rivalry. When the referee called the captains to the center of the field for the coin toss, it was discovered no one had brought a football. The game was delayed for more than an hour while a storekeeper who happened to be in the crowd rode his horse into town to get a ball.

For Huey Long, the late governor of Louisiana, every game that LSU played was a big game. He meddled in the school's football affairs, and in 1934 he demonstrated the depths of his obsession.

LSU was scheduled to play Southern Methodist under Tiger Stadium's lights, but the Barnum & Bailey Circus, on its annual tour of the nation, planned a show in direct conflict with the game.

The Kingfish, a U.S. senator at that time, feared the circus would cut the crowd, and LSU had given SMU a big cash guarantee.

Long decided the circus just wouldn't play, and he found a relatively obscure state law to back his hand.

Long called in a representative of the circus and informed him that Louisiana had a cattle dip law that applied to any animal crossing the state line.

"Did you ever dip a lion?" Long asked the startled man. The circus performance was called off.

Big games. They're the brightest threads in the fabric of college football.

Huey Long was a fan of LSU football.

was runner-up. They finished second and third, respectively, in the NCAA meet.

Wilson and Gerard face the same challenge: staying in top form without the benefit of collegiate competition. Gerard was fifth in the NCAA meet last season.

Cahoy entered college this year but he has been among the leading gymnasts in the country, placing sixth in the U.S. trials for the World Games in 1978.

Iowa State's Ron Galimore, son of former professional football player Willie Galimore, does not own the established credits of the others, but one coach noted the transfer from Louisiana State University has the ability.

for the Jayhawks.

Valentine was an all-conference selection the last two years as a freshman and sophomore. Although he averaged 16.1 points a game last season, Valentine's all-around play and floor leadership are his strongest assets. He also averaged 5.8 assists and 3.1 steals a game last season.

Valentine won a position on the 1979 U.S. team for the Pan American Games but declined to compete so he could attend summer school. He doesn't believe that will hamper his chances for the Olympic team. "They'll have new tryouts and the coaches will be different," he said.

University of Missouri freshman Steve Stipanovich hasn't proved himself in collegiate competition but his height of six-feet, 11-inches and his high school reputation will be difficult to overlook. He was named one of the top three "big men" in the nation last year by Sports Illustrated when he led DeSmet High of St. Louis, Mo., to its second straight state championship.

Stipanovich averaged 24.8 points and 12.7 rebounds a game and hit 62 percent of his field-goal tries and 79 percent of his free throws.

Oklahoma's 6-foot-9 Al Beal and 6-foot-3 guard Raymond Whitley, who helped lead the Sooners to their first conference basketball title in 30 years last season, may be candidates. Beal was 10th in the nation in field-goal percentage with 62.7 and had an eye-catching 2.74 blocked shots a game. "I've seen what are supposed to be the best guards in the country and Whitley ranks right up there with them," said one coach.

THE PSYCHOLOGY OF A FIELD GOAL KICKER

by Marino Parascenzo, Pittsburgh POST GAZETTE

Everything was going well for the coach. Nature had blessed him with a dash of adversity for the routine practice session. It was therefore an inspiring Eastern autumn afternoon—the cold drizzle had ended, but it left a chill air behind, and the artificial turf was well soaked.

His players were sprawled on the cold, wet surface, wrenching themselves through the flexibility drills, and he strolled among them nodding with satisfaction. Until he came to the back row.

The field goal kicker had discovered a large, dry piece of plywood, and he was doing his exercises on it, in relative comfort. The coach snickered. Then he caught himself and put on his practice face.

"What do you think you're doing?" he demanded, glaring down, hands hard on hips.

The kicker stopped and looked up, grinning sheepishly. "Well, uh, my drills," he said.

"Do them over there," the coach said, pointing to a vacant puddle, "so's you can get nice and wet just like everybody else."

Any player worth his sweat would have sneaked to the plywood, of course, but this player happened to be the kicker. Fate seems to bring kickers and awkward moments together. Still, the incident serves to illustrate an idea held dear by many—kickers are different, and not really part of the team.

One sideline philosopher offered a theory. "Kickers are the way they are," he said, "because they were left alone too much as small children."

A West Coast kicker, one of this season's top returnees, may never have heard that assessment, but he touched its fringes with one of his own.

"If we don't seem like part of the team," he said, "it's because we're alone so much with our own practice."

The kicker suffers even greater solitude during the game. Facing only occasional action, and at brittle times, he is left on the sidelines with festering thoughts of doom to come. His is the crisis art. There are 22 men assembled for a field goal try, but the thousands of eyes are on only one man. The screw tightens. It is a good time to break and run for the exit. But the kicker just kicks and awaits the thunder—cheers or jeers.

"Kicking is a mental thing, not a physical thing," said a Southern booter. That seems to be the consensus of kickers.

And perhaps that is what sets the kicker apart and tends to distort the view of him. There is a belief—and it can only be described as universal—that the kicker's mind is in the trees if not among the stars; that he wanders around muttering secret rhythms or praying to obscure deities; that he breathes the rarefied air of discus throwers and metaphysical philosophers.

This is not altogether true. On the other hand, it is not altogether false.

Some kickers admit to striving for mind control, to taking quiet moments before a game for cleansing relaxation through something approaching transcendental meditation—things practically taboo in the manly art, if they are thought of at all. Kickers also "think kicking" in a way that runners cannot "think running."

A kicker depends as much on mental concentration as on actual physical skills.

"When I hit a good kick," said a Northwest kicker, "I practice it in my mind and I try to repeat that same kick over and over."

Thus occupied with the pursuit of the perfect kick, a kicker can develop a blank look on his face, giving rise to suspicions in those around him. But the exercise is not all that odd. Pro golfers practice the perfect shot in their mind. They call it "visualization." It is recommended by many, Jack Nicklaus among them.

"There's no doubt about it, kickers are different," said a Southeastern booter. "You have to be, in order to spend the long hours alone." He used to kick for hours, between two trees at home, until it got too dark to see.

Other football players get strong nicknames, like "Bam" or "Hawk," calling up visions of speed and power and danger. It's different with kickers. Theirs fall into the category of "Bird" and "Blade," both originating because of the kicker's slim build.

Any man who can endure these nicknames can look at a 40-yarder

A man and a woman are walking on a grassy field. The man is wearing a light-colored three-piece suit with a patterned tie and a pocket square. He is smiling and holding a small, light-colored cup. The woman is wearing a long, dark fur coat and a matching hat. They are both looking towards the camera. In the background, there are trees and other people walking, suggesting a park or a public area. The overall tone is warm and autumnal.

without flinching. It's all in how one handles the pressure. Many kickers around the country agree that the kicker has to drop a curtain somewhere in his mind.

"You have to blank out the pressure," said a top returnee this season.

And just when that point is conceded, along comes a dissenting voice.

"I put the pressure on," said a Southeastern booter. "When I was a freshman, I would blank it out, and I would overcompensate and not concentrate enough. So last year I decided to concentrate more. I would tell myself every time—I've got to make this one."

The reverse English worked for that kicker, but not for a Southwestern booter, who went into a game last year with nine straight field goals and needed just two more to tie the NCAA record. "I guess I got to thinking about that record," he said. "I blew the next kick."

Some kickers develop a concentration approaching tunnel vision. A Northwesterner, for example, beat an opponent last year with a remarkable field goal in the dying seconds. The snap was poor and the holder was still trying to get the ball down when his foot came through. He brushed off the praise.

"I didn't pay any attention to any of that," the kicker said. "It's my job to kick. It's his job to get it down."

Better than anyone, the holder understands the kicker. One of last year's leading kickers, an electrical engineering graduate, put the relationship in such a way as to underline both the holder's importance and the kicker's different way of looking at things.

"He isn't my holder," this booter insisted. "I'm his kicker."

The pursuit of the perfect kick leads the kicker to practice, practice and more practice.

Kickers, generally a cerebral group, tend to set things in order quickly. An East Coast booter, for example, was once challenged on the use of the kicking tee. The guy said a kicker is already talented, the tee is an unfair advantage. The kicker dispatched him neatly. "They don't make Tony Dorsett wear heavier shoes, do they?" he said.

The kicker is possibly the most welcome character in football. He is "Everyman" doing what every man cannot do. He is a different kind of hero, sometimes goat. Is he part of the team, or just a lonely soul in pursuit of the perfect kick? Yes and no. He is like the virtuoso standing before the orchestra—they are one, and yet separate. And if he must supply the comic relief at his own expense, so be it. Just let him kick.

"Look at that guy," a bystander said one day, at an Eastern school. Practice had ended and the field was empty, except for the kicker, who stayed to practice his art. He was before his altar, the goal posts—but no holder, no ball. Nothing but kick, kick, kick, through thin air.

"What's wrong with that?" the other guy said. "He's just practicing his swing."

"Yeah," the first guy said. "And watching the ball go through."

Kicker and holder are really a team unto themselves.

GOOD NEWS FOR PEOPLE 7'2" AND UNDER.

If you've always thought a little car meant a lot of crowding, you've obviously never looked into a Volkswagen Rabbit.

There happens to be so much room in a Rabbit that all 7'2" of Wilt Chamberlain can fit comfortably into the driver's seat.

Because the Rabbit has even more headroom than a Rolls-Royce.

As well as more room for people and things than practically every other imported car in its class. Including every Datsun. Every Toyota. Every Honda, Mazda, and Renault.

Not to mention every small Ford and Chevy.

And, of course, what's all the more impressive about the room you get in a Rabbit is that it comes surrounded by the Rabbit itself. The car that, according to Car and Driver Magazine, "...does more useful and rewarding things than any other small car in the world..."

So how can you go wrong?

With the Rabbit you not only get the comfort of driving the most copied car in America.

You also get the comfort of driving a very comfortable car.

Because it may look like a Rabbit on the outside.

But it's a Rabbit on the inside.

THE FIRST CHEVY OF THE '80s. CITATION. OUR MOST SUCCESSFUL NEW CAR EVER.

Ever since its introduction, people have been flooding Chevy showrooms across the country to see the 1980 Chevy Citation. And according to Retail Delivery Reports, 33,765 units were sold in its first three weeks, more than any new entry Chevrolet has ever introduced.

MID-SIZE ROOM FOR 5.

Citation's engine is mounted sideways, so the passenger compartment can be bigger. In fact, in EPA interior dimensions, Citation is classified as a mid-size car. With the back seat folded down there's room enough for two adults in front and 30 bags of groceries in back.

0 TO 50 IN 9 SECONDS FLAT WITH THE AVAILABLE V6.

In engineering tests, Citation goes from 0 to 50 in 9 seconds flat. That's with available 2.8 Liter V6 engine and automatic transmission. California figures not available. (Citation is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your dealer for details.)

EASY ON GAS. 24 EPA ESTIMATED MPG. 38 HIGHWAY ESTIMATE.

That's with Citation's standard 2.5 Liter 4-cylinder engine and manual transmission. (Manual transmission currently not available in California. Calif. estimates lower.)

Citation's standard 4-speed transmission is made to conserve gas. It's an overdrive. And at cruising speeds the 4th gear lets the engine run slower than with a conventional transmission, helping to get impressive fuel economy.

IMPRESSIVE LONG-RANGE CRUISING ESTIMATES, TOO.

And Citation's long-range cruising estimates are just as impressive. 336 miles based on EPA estimated MPG (city) mileage figures, and 532 miles based on estimated highway MPG. Range figures obtained by multiplying Citation's 14-gallon fuel tank capacity rating by the EPA mileage estimates.

REMEMBER: Compare the circled estimated MPG to the estimated MPG of other cars. You may get different mileage and range depending on your speed, trip length and weather. Your actual city mileage and range will be less in heavy city traffic. Your actual mileage will probably be less than the highway estimate.

YOU'VE GOT TO DRIVE IT TO BELIEVE IT.

When you drive Citation you'll see what all the excitement is about. The way it feels. The way it maneuvers. The way it rides. And Citation's front wheel drive puts approximately 65% of its weight over the "driving wheels" to give you impressive traction on wet or snowy roads.

IT'S A WHOLE NEW KIND OF COMPACT CAR.

There's still a lot about Citation that we haven't mentioned. Like slip stream design to cut down on wind resistance and wind noise. The hidden cargo area in all hatchback models, so what's inside is protected from view. A dual diagonal braking system. And much, much more. That's why we encourage you to see your Chevy dealer and test drive the 1980 Chevy Citation today. This could be the car you've had in mind.

HONDA PRELUDE

HONDA ACCORD®
4-DOOR SEDAN

At Honda we have never believed in making lots of different types of cars. But 1979 is a different kind of year for Honda. We've introduced two new cars. The Accord 4-Door Sedan and the Honda Prelude. You might say we've opened things up a bit. Literally.

Our new Prelude boasts a power-operated, tinted glass moonroof as standard equipment. The moonroof comes with a manual sunshade, like the window shade on a jetliner.

Not only does our new Accord sedan have four doors, it has a nice, big trunk as well. It also has a lever that allows you to release the lid from the driver's seat. So if you're thinking about buying a new car, take a close look at our new Hondas. And open the door to simplicity.

HONDA

We make it simple.

The American Eagle Radial. Why it belongs on America's finest cars.

The Goodyear American Eagle Radial tire is as revolutionary today as our first rayon cord tire was in 1938 and our Polyglas in 1967 and the Polysteel Radial when introduced in 1974.

What makes the American Eagle Radial the tire for today is belts of Flexten cord. It is made from a flexible, man-made aramid fiber that is, pound for pound, stronger than steel. Flexten cord—a step ahead of steel—makes the American Eagle Radial tough and strong. Yet, the American Eagle is gratifyingly smooth riding, too.

Comfort, control and confidence are the qualities of the American Eagle Radial... the unique luxury tire designed by Goodyear for the American driver and the American road. We invite you to inspect and to enjoy American ingenuity... from Goodyear.

FOOTBALL IN THE

by Blaine Newnham,
Eugene REGISTER-GUARD

The raccoon coat may have been hung up in the closet with the button down shirt, but the zest for college football had not waned as the '70s began.

And, then, as Greeks and girls once again became important things, the college game picked up steam.

A nation got up to watch season-ending thrillers on Thanksgiving morning.

The 1970s saw freshmen become eligible to play on the varsity again for the first time since after World War II, it saw restrictions on scholarships and the size of coaching staffs, it saw rules implemented to save knees and the athletic futures of young men, and it saw the advent of the veer and the wishbone.

It also saw the departure and return of two of its most successful coaches. Just like the millions of fans and alums everywhere, they couldn't stay away from college football.

"In the 1970s there has been a greater emphasis on the skilled players in college football," said one well-respected coach. "The early '70s were marked by the veer at Houston and then the wishbone at Texas. Now, as the '70s are on their way out, the trend is toward the passing game and a mobile quarterback.

"It's a wonderful game, one that will always be changing. With over 600 schools, somebody is always coming up with something new."

The freshness, the kids, the cheerleaders, the bands, whatever it is, people like it.

It is truly remarkable that the college game—the same game played by Red Grange and Ernie Nevers and Johnny Lujack—is now seen by more people on television and in the stadiums across the land as well than at any time in its history.

Colleges saw 34 million people attend games played in 1978 and the American Broadcasting Company pay $30 million a year for the television rights to do games of all levels. All records.

And although the football giants dominated the 1970s as they did the 1960s before that, the game has moved away from an elitism, rather than towards it.

Instead, legislation worked toward parity of its members and television contracts of the late 1970s began to ensure television for Division I-AA, Division II and Division III as well as Division I.

In 1977, ABC televised 13 national games as it had done through most of the 1970s, but in 1978 it covered 45 regional 41% BETTER EPA ESTIMATED GAS MILEAGE IN OUR MOST EXCITING PONTIAC PHOENIX EVER.

What a difference a model year can make.

That's all it's taken for our all new 1980 Pontiac Phoenix to score 41 percent better EPA estimated MPG over its 1979 counterpart. (Based on a comparison of 1979 and 1980 Pontiac Phoenix models with standard powertrains.* The highway percentage increase is 42 percent.)

HWY ESTIMATE

It's all the more exciting when you consider these 1980 Phoenix mileage estimates.

Remember: Compare the circled estimated MPG with that of other cars. Your mileage may vary depending on speed, trip length and weather. And your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the highway estimate. Standard powertrain not currently avail. in Calif.

But great mileage is just the beginning of the excitement. Phoenix for 1980 has been dramatically redesigned from the ground up. Choose from the rakish new five-passenger Phoenix Coupe and the sporty and versatile Phoenix Hatchback.

You get an exciting new chapter of Pontiac driving fun. With front-wheel drive. Rack and pinion steering. And MacPherson strut front suspension.

Another exciting thought. You get even more standard features than on our well-equipped '79 Phoenix. Such new standards as radial tuned suspension, integral body-color bumpers, column-mounted dimmer/washer switch, dome lamp switches on all the doors, load floor Hatchback carpeting and much more.

That's more Pontiac.

So don't let the excitement pass you by. Buy or lease the all new Phoenix Coupe and Hatchback at your Pontiac dealer's. It's going to be quite a year.

games. Clearly, the game was to be seen by more people and from more locations.

If you wonder that the college game really is that popular, and if it can compete in homes across the land against the NBA, the NFL, the NHL, the NASL, major league baseball, Soap, and Laverne and Shirley, then look to the commercial market and what the going rate is for television rights.

In 1976, following the 1975 season and the best ratings the colleges have ever had, ABC signed a contract to pay $18 million a year on a two-year contract to do college football.

People were impressed. Then, two million watched in 1970, 8.7 in 1971, 8.6 in 1972, 8.0 in 1973, 8.2 in 1974, 9.2 in 1975, and a record 10.0 in 1976. Recent ratings indicated that 9.6 watched in 1977 and 8.9 in 1978. In the decade of the '70s, ABC went from doing ten national games and 26 regionals in 1969 to 13 nationals and 45 regionals in 1979.

As far as people turning out on brisk Saturdays to sit in the stadiums, the numbers are astounding.

In fact, helped by a grass roots surge in Divisions II and III, college football attendance in 1978 enjoyed its second largest increase in history—1,346,428 spectators for an all-time national high of 34,251,606 spectators.

eastern, Big Eight, Pacific-10, Southwest, Atlantic Coast Conference, and the Western Athletic Conference—were up 1,761 per game in 1978, their biggest increase ever to an all-time high of 48,215 for each game.

And for the first time since 1970-71, both the top seven conferences and all other teams in the country went up together two straight years.

Which was significant. Every year previously back to 1967, the independents were up in the odd-numbered years and down in the even-numbered years. So it was rare and significant that the big conferences should go up at the same time that the independents and years later, ABC and the NCAA sat down and negotiated a four-year contract to last through 1981. It was a total package of $118 million, or $30 million a year.

Wide open passing attacks coupled with high scoring offenses have drawn record crowds to college stadiums throughout the '70s.

Never had college football had the leverage to extract a four-year contract before, or demand that the package include twice the regional games previously done and a season peppered with games from the other divisions.

Obviously, ABC had something it liked and wanted to keep.

All through the '70s its ratings steadily, if not consistently, improved. In terms of millions of viewers watching college football on an average Saturday, Nielsen ratings indicated that 8.3 million watched in 1970, 8.7 in 1971, 8.6 in 1972, 8.0 in 1973, 8.2 in 1974, 9.2 in 1975, and a record 10.0 in 1976. Recent ratings indicated that 9.6 watched in 1977 and 8.9 in 1978. In the decade of the '70s, ABC went from doing ten national games and 26 regionals in 1969 to 13 nationals and 45 regionals in 1979.

As far as people turning out on brisk Saturdays to sit in the stadiums, the numbers are astounding. In fact, helped by a grass roots surge in Divisions II and III, college football attendance in 1978 enjoyed its second largest increase in history—1,346,428 spectators for an all-time national high of 34,251,606 spectators.

Significantly, the top seven major college conferences—Big Ten, Southeastern, Big Eight, Pacific-10, Southwest,

Atlantic Coast Conference, and the Western Athletic Conference—were up 1,761 per game in 1978, their biggest increase ever to an all-time high of 48,215 for each game.

And for the first time since 1970-71, both the top seven conferences and all other teams in the country went up together two straight years.

Which was significant. Every year previously back to 1967, the independents were up in the odd-numbered years and down in the even-numbered years. So it was rare and significant that the big conferences should go up at the same time that the independents and

ABOUT THE AUTHOR—Blaine Newnham, sports editor of The Eugene (Ore.) Register-Guard since 1971, feels that relevancy is a must for sports writing. "It must answer the questions of the fans. It must be done with style, a style encompassing accuracy, entertainment, integrity and a real care for the reader's needs." Newnham, a journalism major at the University of California at Berkeley, authored the book The Jogging Experience and was voted Oregon's Sports Writer of the Year in 1974.

For a while it was presumed that the college game would flourish only in college towns, and not in areas where the pros played. In 1978, one Southwest Conference school increased its home attendance by 24,921 a game to 51,959 even though playing in the same state with a major football power and a Super Bowl champion.

It was winning, a wide-open passing game and an extensive, multi-faceted promotional campaign which produced the increase.

In 1973, the NCAA realigned its members with a Division II and a Division III and then starting in 1978 went to Division I-AA for schools nearly the size and strength of those playing Division IA but looking for a different scope of competition.

Even stormy weather does not keep today's fans away from the game.

At the same time the NCAA membership voted to control the growth of big-time college football, hopeful of both keeping expenses in check and moving toward a parity which might increase interest and attendance at the other schools in the league.

Coaching staffs were limited to eight assistants and scholarships were limited to 105 and eventually to 95. Schools were allowed to give no more than 30 scholarships in a single year.

There was cost-cutting, to be sure, but moreover there were more good football players to be shared. A football power might take its favorite 30, but there were still some very good players to be taken by others.

There is no question that a few schools still go to most of the bowl games. But considering the two decades just past, only four schools ranked in the top ten during both ten-year periods.

If you wondered why more people all the time are watching college football, it might well be that the teams are more offensive than ever before.

In 1975, college football teams were averaging 408.9 yards per game (both teams) as the wishbones and veers put running backs in the open field as they never had been before.

At the same time, passing, which started the decade at 305.3 yards per game in 1970, hit a bottom of 239.2 in 1975, but then started coming back up in 1976 to 246.9 and finally to 277.7 in 1978.

Running dropped off slightly, but in 1978 it was the best of both worlds for the offense—rushing was at 358.2 (the seventh highest in history) and passing was at 277.7 (the fifth highest in history). The total was 662.9, or the highest in history. The key? Greater efficiency of offense, and more highly-skilled players.

In addition, 1978 saw all field-goal accuracy and total field goal records smashed. In eight years since 1970, the percentage of accuracy of field goals was up 25 percent.

In the 1970s the college football teams put an average of more than 40 points on the scoreboard (both teams combined) while gaining more yardage than ever before.

The excitement didn't go unnoticed, not by the fans, not by the networks. Who says a raccoon coat can't be in style forever?

WHY MORE AND MORE PEOPLE ARE ASKING FOR A CHAIN SAW THEY CAN'T EVEN PRONOUNCE.

Poolen. Pullen. Polann.

With a name like Poulan, getting people to say the name right may be asking a lot.

On the other hand, people ask an awful lot of our saws. Quick starting. Extra cutting power. Quiet operation. Beautiful styling. Durability. Affordability.

And we deliver all that plus a lot of other standard features, no matter which Poulan saw they buy. From the Poulan Micro XXV right on up to our pro models.

At Poulan, we figure the more we put into our saws, the less people have to put into cutting.

Maybe that's why more and more people keep asking for our saws.

And as long as they keep doing that, they can say the name any way they like.

For years, the tight end had one responsibility—to block a linebacker and help an offensive foray spring loose. In recent years, however, the demands of playing tight end have become greater and greater—some think as varied as the demands of the linebacker on defense.

In fact, mastery of the tight end spot requires, in some minds, the best combination of skills of any football player on the field.

As one West Coast athletic director sees it, "The tight end has to be a pass receiver-blocker combination, and he can expect contact on every play. Most of his routes are to the inside, where things are at their most violent."

Though the prototype tight end is someone who stands well over six feet and scales well over 200 pounds, many feel it is a player's skill and ability to withstand the varied nature of the position that make a successful tight end.

"He's kind of an all-everything guy," said a Southeastern Conference coach of the tight end spot. "He has to do so many things, and that means he has to block, catch passes, and run. He probably has the ability to play a lot of positions on the team. Some teams get along without one, especially on the college level, but a good tight end will open the defense up."

The feeling that the tight end might be the best athlete on the field was echoed by others. As one Big Eight assistant put it, "The tight end has to be a good enough blocker to make the run offense go and he has to be an adequate receiver to make the pass a threat."

Perhaps the oddest aspect of the tight end position is that

University of Missouri high jumper Nat Page, Iowa State University intermediate hurdler Debbie Esser and Oklahoma intermediate hurdler Gregg Byram.

Page, who was the first Illinois high school athlete to clear seven feet when he was at Evanston, Ill., claimed the NCAA high jump title with a leap of 7-4½ this year.

Page, who sat out the 1978 season so he could compete in college in the Olympic year, is a bit unusual in that he starts from a memorized mark, not using tape or chalk, and does not go through a series of stares, pumps or rocks before starting his run at the bar.

Byram, who gave up football to concentrate on track, was third in 1978 and fifth in 1979 in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles in the NCAA meets. He ran for the Pacific Coast Club this summer and is considering training for the decathlon.

Esser won the AIAW national title in the intermediate hurdles but unfortunately there is no such event for women in the Olympics. So the native of Woodbine, Iowa, competed in the Pan American Games and World Cup this summer and is considering training for the women's 400-meter dash.

team in wrestling are Oklahoma State University's Jimmy Jackson and Eric Wais, Iowa State's Ben Peterson and Oklahoma's Jim Humphrey and Andre Metzger.

Rules and techniques differ between the U.S. collegiate style and international freestyle and Greco-Roman styles. So college champions are not always the leading contenders in international competition.

Peterson was a gold medal winner in the 1976 Olympics. Although he has been out of collegiate competition for more than four years, Peterson remains a leading candidate.

Jackson, NCAA champion at heavyweight in 1977 and 1978, also may suffer because of lack of competition. Wais was the NCAA winner at 190 this year and is expected to become more active in freestyle competition.

Humphrey and Metzger offer an interesting situation since they compete at the same weight, 136.5 pounds, and Humphrey, who is an assistant coach at Oklahoma, is Metzger's coach as well as his competition.

Humphrey won the AAU title in 1978 but suffered a knee injury this season and did not compete. But Metzger replaced him as the AAU champion.

The University of Colorado is the only Big Eight college participating in skiing, but the Golden Buffaloes have won the NCAA team title the last eight years. Colorado's Dale Pearson, who was fifth in the giant slalom last season and was an All-American selection in 1978, may be one of this country's leading candidates in the alpine events.

What it means to be a breed apart.

Imagination, instinct, and versatility (not size alone) set Merrill Lynch apart from the rest of the herd.

Too many people see only the size of Merrill Lynch; they miss the subtler qualities that truly make us a breed apart. For example:

Imagination. An oil exploration company needed $75 million, but traditional ways of raising it would have overly diluted earnings or impaired financial flexibility. Our solution: a public offering of convertible preferred stock.

Instinct. A corporate client wanted to buy back 200,000 shares of its own stock. Getting the best price was a question of market timing...of knowing when to walk out of the market and let the price sink, when to buy aggressively.

That's instinct. And it helped us buy all 200,000 shares within 1/2 point of the starting price.

Versatility. We can also help you reach your personal financial goals, despite changing markets and tough tax laws. As your assets grow and your needs change, your Account Executive can keep pace with equities, commodities, bonds, annuities, and tax investments.

How can Merrill Lynch's unmatched resources benefit you? Ask us. Find out what it means to deal with a breed apart.

its responsibilities change from team to team. In general, most other positions make the same demands from team to team—the running backs run, the wide receivers go out for passes, the linemen block or tackle. But depending on his team — or even on particular game situations—the tight end may be asked to do any and all of these things (with the possible exception of tackle) during the course of a single afternoon.

And even if the tight end does no tackling himself, he must have a better-than-average knack for breaking the tackles of a defensive man in order to do his own job. "The tight end usually has to be strong enough to get past the linebacker on his side," says an East Coast coach, "even a linebacker that outweighs him by 30 to 40 pounds. That is, if the offense is going to have the kind of variety you want. Often, a block or a break of a tackle by the tight end is the key to making a particular play work, whether it's a run or pass. Very often, the tight end is the guy you're disguising the whole play around. And if the tight end is a legitimate threat to receive the ball on the play—whether you actually throw to him or not—the defense has to consider him in its planning.

"This means," concludes the coach, "that a tight end in many cases has to be the best athlete on the field. And if you've got a real good one, well, you've got something."

The position of tight end has changed over the years. Not too long ago, a slower man would be assigned to the spot. He would be expected to block and to keep the defense away from the running backs.

Today, teams need a tight end who can catch the ball, at least a little. While he need not be a gazelle, the tight end should know something about how to run a pass route, how to cut—all the things a receiver has to do. In earlier years, the tight end was seen as a primary receiver only in desperate situations. Today a lot of passing plays are geared expressly for the tight end—when he is the type of player who has pass-catching abilities. And you can bet that everyone is looking for that type of player.

Intelligence is also viewed as a chief requisite of the tight end, and one with real "smarts" is that much more valuable. A Midwest assistant coach gives this example: "An audible means most players shift blocking assignments, but the tight end must quickly shift from a pass pattern to a blocking assignment. This type of adjustment takes a lot of concentration plus an unusual amount of talent. Because he must make these types of adjustments and still carry out the assignment with a high degree of skill, the tight end is, indeed, the best football player on the field."

One Northwest man puts it this way: "Sometimes you have a player who comes to your school as a tight end, but you can't afford the luxury of keeping him at that spot all the time. You have a manpower shortage somewhere else, and if you have the right kind of athlete, you can take a boy who's been a tight end and move him inside on the offensive line to a tackle or guard spot, or make him a wide receiver. The real good tight ends who play their entire college careers at only that position are at a premium.

"Is the tight end the best athlete on the field? When you've got the kind who can do many different things, the answer is probably yes. The truth is that at many schools, the all-around tight end is too valuable to use there all the time. If he can catch passes, you might want to flank him outside to take advantage of his receiving, and if he blocks very well, you might prefer having him work most of the time as an offensive lineman."

The ability to withstand constant physical pounding is discussed by a man who coaches a Southern independent. "One thing the tight end is almost guaranteed is physical contact on every play," he says. "And that tends to limit the number of guys who really enjoy the position. Not only does he have to be a big, strong kid, but he really has to enjoy that shot on every play, even the ones in which he doesn't even figure. It comes with the territory, that shot in the side, that punishing block, all of that, and a lot of kids have had trouble staying with it, even when they had what it took physically.

"Tight end isn't for everybody," he concludes.

And not everybody agrees on the overall worth of the tight end. A coach in the Western Athletic Conference says, "I don't think the tight end is the finest player on the field. On offense, I think the quarterback and running backs are better players. On defense, I think the linebackers are better. Certainly the tight end has to be a cut above the average kid. But I think at tight end you can get by with a competitor who can run and catch the football. In college football, the tight end is a combination tackle and wide receiver. He's probably not the best tackle on the team, nor the best wide receiver. There are exceptions, of course. You might find a few who are complete players, but more often than not they are in-between players."

This opinion was in the minority among those contacted for purposes of researching this article. But even this dissenting view points out the multifaceted nature of a successful tight end play. Even in suggesting that the tight end doesn't necessarily have to excel either at line play or at pass-catching, the WAC coach concedes that the tight end is asked to do both with great frequency.

"Just being asked to do all that makes the tight end one of the most valuable guys on the team," says a Big Ten Coach. "Maybe that's the key word here for a tight end—valuable. Obviously, there are excellent athletes at every position. A defensive lineman who weighs 275 pounds may be a great athlete, but you're not going to ask him to be a runner or receiver, and a 185-pound safety may be a fine athlete, but he won't help you on the line.

"So maybe that's what it really comes down to—the value a good tight end has to a team," concluded the Big Ten man. "It's something you can't put a figure on, or give a proper evaluation to. You know, if they ever changed football to a 10-man game, the tight end might be the first position eliminated on offense. But the way the game is played now, that tight end might be the one guy you couldn't do without."

With Skylark's EPA estimated mileage and 14-gallon fuel tank, your gas station attendant may even forget what you look like.

Skylark

offers an EPA estimated

24 mpg, estimated 38 for highway.

Remember: Compare this estimate with the "estimated mpg" of other cars.

You may get different mileage depending on your speed, trip length and weather. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less than the estimated highway fuel economy. Estimates lower in California.

It just might be the perfect car for you.

Sure, it's important these days to drive a car that's sensible in the gasoline mileage department. But you also want a car that performs. Happily, Skylark is both. With the standard 1980 2.5 liter 4-cylinder engine and available automatic transmission, it's quicker from 0-50 mph than last year's Skylark with the standard 3.8 liter V-6 and automatic. THE BALANCED ATTACK GIVES A TEAM A DECIDED EDGE

by Mal Florence, Los Angeles TIMES

A popular Southeastern coach has run the gamut on offense from a conservative wishbone (with three or four passes a game) to a multiple or pro-styled attack.

Why has he converted to a more balanced brand of football? "Most teams are lining up in an eight-man defensive front now instead of seven," he says, "and it's difficult to run against the eight-man front but easier to pass on it. Because of this I think there is a trend away from pure option football."

Yet, this Southeastern coach was once identified with the coaching fraternity that believed that three things can happen when you pass—and two of them are bad (incompletions, interceptions).

"Most people assume that a passing game is a high risk offense," he says. "It is only if you have an unreliable quarterback. The risk diminishes in proportion to the intelligence of the quarterback."

"A so-called pro-type offense has a different connotation to

continued

Some schools renowned for their tailback-oriented offense won some big games last season—by passing.

Other schools, highly ranked in the wire service poll at the end of the season, have been eminently successful with a wishbone-style attack geared to the running game. But they operate from other formations and are not reluctant to pass.

Traditional advocates of power football and the running game are incorporating more passes into their offense.

There is a trend, many college coaches say, to a balanced offensive approach. This doesn't mean a 50-50 ration between the run and pass but the ability to be flexible.

"Defenses have become so sophisticated now that they can focus on any particular offensive phase of the game and take it away from you," says a prominent West Coast coach. "So an offense must be balanced. By balance I mean two things—to attack effectively someone who is, say, overplaying the run and to complete enough passes for consistent gains—not necessarily long passes—but a high percentage of completions."

Balance, the West Coast coach continued, isn't just an immediate reaction to a defensive scheme but must be part of your overall offensive philosophy.

"You just can't run the ball for seven games and then be put in a position where you have to pass and be able to do it," he says. "You can go down some roads you can't come back from. Nor can you win four games by passing 40 times and then all of a sudden be expected to run 50 times in a game in order to win. It can't be done."

me than other people. To me it means we won't run any option. That's all.

"It's much easier to run the option against a seven-man front and harder to throw against it. It's the opposite with an eight-man front and it's difficult to find a quarterback who is both a good option runner and a good passer."

The West Coast coach says that if a quarterback is involved in the option game, he can't develop as a passer.

"In the pure option the quarterback is involved in every running play," he says. "But, if you're not running the option, the quarterback's presence isn't required as much when you're practicing the running game. So he has more times to improve his skills as a passer."

But balance isn't for every team. There are notable exceptions.

"A powerhouse that is so overwhelmingly effective with its power-running triple option can go against the percentages (defenses stacked against the run) and still be successful," the West Coast coach says. "There are exceptions to every rule and this case is an exception."

There is another side to the offensive spectrum. While some teams slug it out on the ground, others rely on passing for the main thrust of their offense.

A strong running back plays a key role in a successful offense.

Unusual? Maybe. But establishing the passing game first has been tremendously effective at schools with a strong throwing heritage.

"Certain teams seek balance but from a different angle," a Midwest coach says. "They don't throw just to be throwing but as a means of controlling the ball—and they do it very well. Then, they'll run at you when you're over-playing the pass. But there is always the constant threat of the pass."

So the team achieves balance in its own way.

How does a team defend against a balanced attack—one that has a fine runner and an accurate passer?

"A defense can be a containing one," says the Midwestern coach. "It can try to out-flank the offense, especially if it is concerned about the passing game. Defenses try to take advantage of the field and which hash mark the offense is operating from."

"Or, the defense can be a gambling one—such as blitzes and constantly changing up. The danger is that in changing up you'll be in a defense on occasions that is suited to be exploited by the offense."

It's doubtful that the pass-minded offense is the forerunner of a collegiate trend. Nor can many teams emulate a devastating wishbone running game.

These are offensive philosophies that have been ingrained at certain schools for many years and can't be copied on an experimental basis.

But college defenses, more intricate and sound than they were even 10 years ago, are now dictating to offenses.

And the offense is getting the cue—more balance—run and pass—to keep the defense off balance.

COULD A SHADOW SHED LIGHT ON THEIR SECRET?

The door creaked a cautious welcome as they pushed it open. Their eyes scanned the sparse office, locked on mine, then darted to the darkened hall. Who were they? Why were they here?

Two things I knew for sure. First, they were being followed. And, second, they had real class. Lots of it. Just the cut of their clothes said style and elegance. The fabric said taste.

Questions buzzed in my mind like hornets. But, in this business it's money first. So I told 'em my fee and took a swig of cold coffee. They went for their wallets and suddenly, the pieces fit. I caught a glimpse of a familiar label inside their coats, and knew why they were followed. There ain't a dame around who can pass up the great looks of Haggag Imperial slacks and sport coats.

Imperial
BY HAGGAR

The secret of these good looking Haggag Imperial® fashions is the styling plus fine fabric. It's a comfortable blend of Today's Dacron® from Burlington Menswear® and worsted wool to resist wrinkles and keep you looking good.

Looking good makes you feel good in fabrics of TODAY'S DACRON® from Burlington Menswear®

Hedging or Speculative Commodity Futures?

Invest With The Fowlers' On The Heinold Team...

OMAHA AND PAPILLION.

Interested in hedging or speculative commodity futures? Heinold's Omaha and Papillion offices have an attractive offer for your investment portfolio.

Heinold, a subsidiary of DeKalb Ag Research, is also affiliated with Heinold Hog and Cattle Markets throughout the midwest. Pertinent research and latest marketing information provides customers with fundamental facts — in addition to technical analysis from your Heinold broker.

As grain and livestock specialists, they're in touch with the producer and processor. But equally important is the ability to quickly reach major exchanges across the nation in trading metals, financial instruments, and foreign currencies.

So if you're looking into commodity futures, give the Fowlers' on the Heinold Team the call.

LOCATION LIMIT:

A home insurance policy that comes closer to giving you
FULL replacement cost when you suffer a loss.

Most policies have these limits:

1. A fixed amount on your dwelling.
2. Personal Property (50% of the dwelling amount.)
3. Personal Property (50% of the dwelling amount.)
4. Additional living expense (20% of the dwelling amount.)

With a maximum limit on each of these four items there can be no flexibility should your loss on any item(s) exceed the limit for the item(s).

Our Policy Offers:

1. A location limit amount at the location in the policy. This means that if you suffer a loss under your LOCATION LIMIT policy you can collect for your proven combined loss to the dwelling, outbuildings, personal property and for additional living expense up to the location limit amount, with no "per item" limit restriction.

Her Big Red pride is winning.

Last year more than 150 women participated in Nebraska's intercollegiate athletic program. Our Big Red athletes are feeling the excitement of what a strong athletic program can do.

- * Our volleyball team ranked 17th in the nation.
- * A record of 23-13 ranked basketball 3rd in the Big 8.
- * Our gymnasts took first in the Big 8 and ranked 11th nationally.
- * 18 out of 24 school records were broken in swimming and diving.
- * We were 4th in track and field Big 8 indoor championships.
- * Our softball team had a 19-12 season.
- * Our tennis players are Big 8 champs in singles and doubles.

Not a bad overall record for a good athletic program. But, we can always improve. In recruiting. In scholarships. In training. And in building an even stronger program in years to come. Show your support of Big Red Women's Intercollegiate Athletics. Send us your check...or your name and address, and we'll show you how to become a Big Red Boost Her Club member. While winning isn't everything, our Big Red tradition says it sure feels good.

HOW TO WIN THE TOSS.

Our fluid-support mattress floats you to sleep. Unlike the flat, unyielding surface of a spring bed, our Land and Sky mattress is alive to your body. It conforms to the small of your back, the crook of your neck and the back of your knees so you sleep without restless tossing.

In Lincoln, we offer complete floatation sleep systems, plus everything beautiful to enhance your bedroom environment. We have our own Interior Decorator to confer with you, and our sales people know the Land and Sky product fully so they can answer any questions you may have.

Come in and choose the floatation system that fits your personal sleep-style. Then rest easy. You won't the toss.

Cornhusker Wheel Club 1979

Automobile dealers in Nebraska are contributing a large measure of help to the University of Nebraska athletic program through the loan of courtesy cars. Like other programs which are a part of the Cornhusker booster group activities, this project enables the Nebraska Athletic Department to make greater use of its funds.

These sports-minded dealers around the state have earned a debt of gratitude from the University of Nebraska Athletic Department. They are an important part of the "team" that includes players, coaches, administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, Husker Educational Award group, Touchdown Club, Extra Point Club, Beef Club and the courtesy car program.

KODAK HONORS ALL-AMERICANS

Autumn—the season for the thrills and pageantry of college football. The cohesiveness that has made our country the great land it is can be found every Saturday in stadiums of every size throughout the land as gifted college athletes and loyal followers combine to create an unrivaled spectacle.

At the University of Nebraska, this same aura hangs over Memorial Stadium as the Cornhuskers perform on the gridiron that has brought fame to many sons of yesteryear.

Recall the names Bob Brown, Larry Kramer, Tony Jeter, Walt Barnes, Wayne Meylan, Bob Newton, Johnny Rodgers, Larry Jacobson, Rich Glover, Willie Harper, Daryl White, John Dutton, Marvin Crenshaw, Dave Humm, Rik Bonness, Dave Butterfield and Kelvin Clark. What do they have in common besides being famed members of past Nebraska teams? All were members of Kodak All-America football teams.

The tradition for recognition of individual excellence in college football dates back to 1899 when Yale Coach Walter Camp selected the original All-America football team. This college football tradition continues today with the Kodak All-American team as selected by The American Football Coaches Association.

Eastman Kodak Company is proud to have been associated with the AFCA and the All-America team since 1960. The young men deemed recipients of this most prestigious honor reflect the achievement of excellence that is truly part of the American tradition.

The standard of greatness achieved by Walter Camp shines on these individuals. Football players, yes, but All-Americans all the way.

*HOME GAME

THIS YEAR 2000 FOOTBALL COACHES WILL AGREE ON ONE THING:

THE KODAK ALL-AMERICA FOOTBALL TEAM

At the end of this season, the American Football Coaches Association will agree on 22 college football players who are representative of the best in the nation. For these young men, it will be an unequalled honor to be recognized by the men who know the game best—the coaches. There are many All-American football teams. There is only one selected by the college football coaches. The 1979 Kodak All-America campus receive full credit at the other. Many students take work on both campuses.

In keeping with its record of involvement in a variety of areas, the College offers special double majors with subjects in other colleges. Degrees cutting across college borders are available in Human Development-Special Education and Human Development-Elementary Education, both with Teachers College, and in Home Economics-Journalism, with the School of Journalism.

Many nonmajors, male and female, cross college boundaries by the hundreds to take home economics courses.

"One of the things that makes us a little different from some other colleges," Dean Anthony said, "is the number of students we get from other areas. Last year, we probably had students from every other college in the University. We see ourselves as a college that trains professionals but is a service component for all other colleges," she said.

Interest among students university-wide reflects the broad appeal of the college's subject matter and helps account for its all-time high enrollment last spring of 1,450 students on the two campuses combined. It is approximately the tenth largest home economics college in the U.S., Dean Anthony said.

Obviously, the college is not just training young ladies to become better housewives. Far from it, according to Dean Anthony.

"Very few graduates don't seek work," she said. "They're trained for and want professional opportunities." And they're getting them.

"We're doing very well with placement," Dean Anthony reported, adding that the College expects to do even better. With increased job opportunities for home economists in Nebraska, the percentage of graduates staying in the state has risen from 53% in 1970 to almost 90% in 1978.

Things haven't always been so rosy for home economics in Nebraska. The first courses in the subject were offered in 1898, and it became a "visible" department with its own building in 1909. After being moved around from college to college, it finally found its niche, becoming a school in 1963 and a college in 1970.

It moved into a new building in 1974.

The College's biggest problem for the future is posed by one of its assets, its attractiveness to nonmajors. Dean Anthony predicts that even if enrollment in the University drops as expected, the College will maintain its present large enrollment, which could cause problems due to budget limitations.

"We're going to have to sit down and arrive at some priorities," she said. "If anything, we may have to control growth."

Whatever happens, the College will no doubt continue to have its academic finger in many pies. Associate Dean John Woodward says, "Home economics remains dynamic. We change to meet the demands of the times. And College faculty members will surely be bursting with ideas for meeting those demands."
